

Mr Azad at the market.

Mr Azad usually goes to the market every (1) morning. He always buys everything (2-alles) for the restaurant there. He often meets some (3) friends and talks to them (4). They often talk about many/a lot of (5 -viele) problems at home or in the world. Today they are talking about some/a few (6 –ein paar) problems at the restaurant.

Mr Azad says: “Oh, my dear friend, I need something (7) from Pakistan, but I don’t know any (8) good shops in Pakistan. Do you know any (9) good shops for curry in Pakistan?”

Mr Khan answers: “I can give you the address of some (10) shops in Pakistan, but the best shop is my friend’s shop in Karachi. He’s got many/a lot of (11 -viele) different curries and you can buy everything (12) for your tandoori chickens from him (13). You can buy everything/anything (14) from him (15). Tell him I’m your (16) friend and you get a good price.”

Mr Azad: “Thank you very (17) much (18), my dear friend. And I can give you some (19) information how you can get some (20) cheap air tickets to Pakistan. My brother works for Lufthansa. You can get everything/anything (21) from him, if you tell him I’m your best friend.”

Mr Khan says: “Look at those (22) women over there. They are talking to some/a few/a couple of (23 –ein paar) men in front of the gummi bear shop. They often come to my (24) shoe shop and buy some/their (25) shoes from me. The man in the green T-shirt has got lots of/a lot of (26 -Menge) money, because he often plays football for the national team of Pakistan. His name is Kashif Mumtaz Siddiqi. He knows everything (27) about football. You can ask him anything (28) and he gives you (29) the right answer.”

Mr Azad: “Oh, yes, I know him/that (30). He sometimes comes to my (31) restaurant. He usually eats tandoori chicken with some (32) chips. But I must go back to my restaurant. My wife Seeta is waiting for these (33) things here.” So Mr Azad says good-bye and runs home, because his wife is always angry when he talks too much/long (34) at the market.
